

Responders
Content Guidelines

Synopsis:

Things go from bad to ridiculous in this genre-bending dark comedy, written by Little Rock-native, Joseph Scott Ford. When two small-town paramedics and an ambitious reporter arrive at the roadside scene of an expected suicide, we join them on a journey of trying one's best to do the right thing. This world-premiere production by an Arkansas artist is produced in partnership with TheatreSquared.

Language:

Profanity is used frequently in the play. Specific words include variations of 'f*ck', 'd*ck', 'sh*t', and other colorful language by the characters. There are also various conversations of a sexual nature.

Smoking/Drinking:

There is smoking that takes place on-stage during the play. Additionally there is conversation involving alcohol and drug use.

Sex:

There are conversations around sex in this play though no sexual acts are portrayed onstage..

Violence:

There is a depiction of a dead body hanging on stage during most of the play. The content of this play revolves around issues of mental illness, self-harm, and suicide. Violence is referenced, though not depicted on stage, including specific references of war and weapons use.

Rating:

Rated R for adult language and adult situations